

Volume 2, No. 2 2018

KWASU JOURNAL OF RELIGIOUS STUDIES

ISSN 2579-0463

KWASU

JOURNAL

OF RELIGIOUS STUDIES

VOLUME 2, NO. 2

2018

ISSN 2579-0463

2018)

KWASU JOURNAL OF RELIGIOUS STUDIES

Professor David Olatupo Babalola

Editor (Christian Studies)

Professor Shaykh Luqman Jinab

Editor (Islamic Studies)

Associate Professor Abdul-Sami Ibrahim Aliyevu

Editorial Manager

Dr. Olatunji, Samson Bisi

Volume 2, NO. 2

2018

Published by

Department of Religions, History and Heritage Studies
Kwara State University, Malete
e-mail: iccrsjournal@kwasu.edu.ng

CONTENTS

University Sport, Spirituality and Social Development in Nigeria Raymond Ogunade, Ph.D	1
Asmā 'ullahi Waṣ-Ṣifātihi : A Discourse on Polemics of Sufi and Theologians Sikiru Atanda Adenigba, Ph.D	14
A Moral Discourse on the Phenomenon of Religious Mimicking in Nigerian Films: An Exegetical Study of II Corinthians 11: 13-15. Oladosu, Samson Bisi, Ph.D	30
An Overview of Islamic Guidance and Counselling Elesin, Abdulwahab Muhammad Jamiu, Ph.D & Maisuna Mustapha Yahya	41
The Clergy and Nation Building: A Socio-Religious Perspective Clifford Meesua Sibani, Ph.D.	52
Polemical Discourse on Ḥadīth Matn Analysis in Southern Nigeria Adeyemi Adeola Waliyullahi & Akinwale Adelodun Teslim	64
The Source and Explosion of African Pentecostalism and Globalization Samson Kolawole Oyeku	78
Al-Kafā'ah (Compatibility) between Spouses regarding Righteousness as Discussed in the Tafsīr of Al-Qurtubi: Implications for Marital Life Hassan, Muhammad Kannike	90
African Indigenous Religious Response to Global Debate on Homosexuality: Hermeneutical Study of Relevant Ifá Corpora Ogunbiyi, Olatunde Oyewole, Ph.D & Òkewande, Oluwole Tẹwogboye, Ph.D.	102

AFRICAN INDIGENOUS RELIGIOUS RESPONSE TO GLOBAL DEBATE ON HOMOSEXUALITY: HERMENEUTICAL STUDY OF RELEVANT IFÁ CORPORA

Ogunbiyi, Olatunde Oyewole, Ph.D.

Department of Religions,
University of Ilorin, Ilorin.

&

Òkèwándé, OluwoléTẹwọgbaye, Ph.D.

Department of Linguistics and Nigerian Languages, University of Ilorin, Ilorin.

Abstract

The global debate on homosexuality has been a major religious concern to different beliefs. This present work therefore acknowledges the abundance of literatures on global debates on homosexuality. Homosexuality, in the recent time, has taken different dimensions in several academic disciplines from religion, extending to politics and economic engagements. So far, the emphasis on the quantum of literature about homosexuality is either argument in favor of the phenomenon or against the idea. However, it is worthy of note, to say that, virtually believers of religions have attempted to contribute their quota to the argument or debate by taking an introspective look at the sacred writings of their respective religions. By way of filling a part of the lacuna in the literature, this study examines the sacred literature of the indigenous religion of the Yorùbá people, especially, Ifá, in regards to homosexuality. It is noted that, Ifá, is the sacred genre for all the Yorùbá divinities and the springboard on which the culture of the Yorùbá people rests. The study as evinced from ifá Literary Corpus established in strong terms, argument against the philosophical concept of homosexuality. The argument is generated from relevant stanzas of Ifá corpus; which are hermeneutically explicated and analyzed. This becomes part of an epistemological consideration into the debate concerning the issue of homosexuality. The paper concludes that, although, there may be other positions on the issue of homosexuality, the sola scriptura of Yoruba traditional religious beliefs, is of the opinion that homosexuality is ungodly, unhealthy, immoral, unnatural and therefore forbidden; as such hampers development of individual, society and the nation at large. This is against the backdrop of Yorùbá worldview that encourages the birth of children in perpetuity of the family. Furthermore, this study notes that while homosexual tendencies are abhorrent, homosexuals should not be rejected or stigmatized, rather they should be assisted to change their perceptions.

Introduction

The discussion over homosexuality has been in the front burner in global circles for several years now. It has followed a pattern whereby, the practice has continued till the present time when focus has spread to its nature. Many have continued to attack the idea that people of same sex should not marry while others are of the opinion that there is nothing wrong with the idea. These debates have created a lacuna between individuals, interest groups and even between nations. The cause of these arguments rests on the fact that religious communities and the gay communities are usually against one another. It is noteworthy to observe here that one of the reasons why this gay idea seems to linger for a long time in debate is not unconnected to the fact that the homosexual tendencies have pervaded virtually every stratum of the society.¹ Actors, politicians, and many people in financial institutions have openly announced their gay status. Here, in Africa, evidence of homosexuality has been with us for a long time, but today, there is beginning to emerge a group of people in Nigeria, who are also announcing their homosexual preferences to heterosexual unions. Many religious clergies have come out to openly accept their gay identity culminating into the resignation of some of the ministers from their assignment. All over America today, evidence abound showcasing single-sex marriage solemnization between lesbians and gay people who are convinced of their status and wish to get married. Each religious group has endeavored to seek from their scriptures what God teaches about these tendencies. Is God encouraging these tendencies or is it abhorrent to him? The point here however is not to question the validity of the scriptures in the justification of homosexuality and same-sex marriage from the viewpoints of religions all over the world. Rather, the focus of this work is to examine the oral traditions of the Yoruba speaking people of south west Nigeria. What does Ifá, the sola scriptura of the Yoruba says about homosexuality? How does the worldview contained in the Ifá Corpus support or reject homosexuality? The emphasis of this research is examining the contributions of Ifá scriptures to the debate of homosexuality. The methodology is theological and argumentative. Qualitative data will be taken across the nooks and crannies of Yoruba land in the determination of the avowed objective. The Babaláwo or Ìyánifá (the Priest or Priestess) the custodians of the mysteries of the message of Ọrúnmìlà will be interviewed extensively as they will help in the hermeneutical approach of the research emphasis.²

Conceptual Meaning and Theoretical Framework

The term homosexuality is a blanket term frequently used to cover several sexual behaviors which covering such terms like gay, homosexual, lesbians, lesbianism, and single sex marriages to mention a few. However, for the purpose of elucidation in this paper, homosexuality covers the above mentioned names but actually deeper than that. In this paper, homosexuality is used in the description of a person's orientation and his or her behavior. Homosexual orientation is understood to mean sexual attraction to other members of the same sex which may either lead to marriage or not. On the other hand, homosexual behavior means active involvement in sexual activity with another of the same sex irrespective of whether they are married or not.³

Three theories are apposite in the consideration of homosexual tendencies. These include the attribution theory, the contact theory and the symbolic interactionism theory. While the three guide the thought of this paper, the symbolic interactionism theory will be primarily focused for some reasons. These include the fact that it is related to the utilization of religious perceptions in the determination of the attitude towards homosexuality. The attribution theory posits that individuals work to predict and control their environment by attributing others' behaviors as the result of internal or external factors. The theory was proposed by Heider and later developed by Weiner.⁴ He introduced the idea of controllability to the theory, believing that human behavior can either be controllable or uncontrollable. Every controllable behavior an individual exhibits, he or she will be held responsible. Those whose responsibilities are controllable but fail to do this are viewed negatively, as a matter of fact, they are stigmatized. What the attribution theory does is to accept that some people may be homosexuals by nature and therefore may not be able to control their homosexual tendencies. Herek and Glunt and Whitehead found that people who believe that homosexuality is the result of natural or biological forces have more positive attitudes to gay rights and same-sex unions, whereas those attributing homosexuality as the result of a choice have more negative attitudes towards same-sex unions.⁵

The second theory is the contact theory which holds that a person becomes what he or she is in constant contact with another person. In this sense, proponents of this theory hold that people become homosexuals as a result of their contact with homosexuals. Hans maintains that interpersonal contact with homosexuals promote more positive attitudes towards homosexuality. He has tested this hypothesis among lesbians and homosexuals and have found this idea to be true with lesbians than with homosexuals.⁶

These hypotheses are important as they have little to do with religion. This leads to the third theory, the symbolic interactionism. The theory defines how religion influences attitudes towards homosexuality. Blumer, one of the strong advocates of symbolic interaction theory, is of the opinion that people create attitudes towards "things" in terms of meanings they attach to them. By "things" he meant everything existing in the physical world: human beings, social groups and activities to mention only a few. Accordingly, there exists a multitude of meanings, these meanings are social constructs and they determine what opinion a person will have toward a "thing" (the physical world). In other words, the meaning that is created by people will influence their interpretation or attitude towards that "thing."⁷ Kuptsevych explains further:

The application of the relationship between corresponding constructs (main variables) for this study can be viewed as following: That is, positive or negative attitudes towards homosexuality will be shaped by the degree people use religious ideology as a meaning system in their life. In other words, the degree to which a person uses system of religiosity influences attitudes towards homosexuality (positive or negative).⁸

From the above, it is clear that religiosity as a system of meaning becomes an index in the affectations of homosexual perceptions.

Contemporary Arguments for and against Homosexuality

Over the years, there is increasing debate over the legalization or otherwise concerning homosexuality. This discussion has gotten to the level where nations are now involved in the legalization or outlaw of homosexuality. The debate is along two lines. First is the pro-homosexual group and anti-homosexuality. Many nations like America and in Europe do not see anything wrong in the idea and have therefore legalized homosexuality. On the other hand are those who detest the homosexual tendencies and have decided never to entrench such in their constitutions. Many of these nations are in Africa, such as Nigeria. This has led to the cancellation or suspensions of donations to these nations because of their contrary positions. The debate is so passionate that the African nations prefer to forfeit these subventions than to legalize homosexual, which is regarded as an affront against God. A critical look at these nations gives the impression that the nations that legalize homosexuality belong to the modern world, they do not hold religion on very high level. Meanwhile, African nations that do not accept homosexuality, are the nations that are religious (so to say) and backward. It must however be placed on record that, within the nations that support homosexuality, there are individuals and organizations that are preaching against the conduct. On the other hand, there are individuals who strongly support the idea of homosexuality in nations that reject same. A cursory observation of these contrary positions will be apposite at this juncture.⁹

Those who are in favor of this argument have advanced several reasons for this phenomenon. Sprigg posits that those in favor of homosexuality can be called the "Gay Identity" Paradigm. He goes forward to identify their views that:

Sexual orientation is an innate personal characteristic, like race. People are born gay. Gay people can never become heterosexual. Being gay is essentially no different from being straight, except for the gender to which one is sexually attracted. There is no harm in being gay." This opinion highlights the position of the "Gay Identity" Paradigm which has been consistently held that just as people are born with the desire for the opposite sex, so are gay people with the attraction to single sex people. Hence, people are born lesbians or homosexual, as a result, they have not done anything contrary of the demands of God. His position that gay people can never be heterosexual is not very correct because some homosexuals are actually married to opposite sexes or carry on heterosexual relationships. The gay are such because they believe that being gay is not only natural but harms nobody. Those in favor of homosexuality believe that preference for opposite sex is tantamount to racial segregation.¹⁰

Arguments Against

On the other hand are those who have stood vehemently on the idea that homosexuality is an error. Most literature in this regard is from religious quarters. According to Dallas, all the three primary arguments of homosexuality (innateness argument, insignificance argument and the intolerance argument) have no basis. Quoting copiously from the Bible, he dismantled the arguments of the homosexuals. He insists that homosexual acts are chosen rather than innate, that homosexual attitudes are very significant before God rather than insignificance and that the idea of intolerance does really have little to do in terms of acceptability.¹¹ On his own, Abass Bolatito prefers to view the debate on homosexuality from the perception of natural law theory of morality in African Culture. He believes that the theory often referred to by homosexuals is a weak one in the sense that man is responsible for all his action rather than the fact that being made homosexuals.¹²

Ifá Corpus: Sola Scriptura of the Religious Beliefs of the Yoruba of Nigeria

The term sola scriptura is a Christian terminology that the authors of this paper have applied to the Ifá corpus and the Yoruba traditional religious consciousness. The term is originally applied to the Bible through the use of five indices that include: its revelation coming directly from God, its sufficiency for faith and practice, its possession of final authority and its perspicuity Geisler and MacKenzie.¹³ When these indices are used to measure the Ifá Corpus of the Yoruba beliefs, sola scriptura captures the essence of the Yoruba traditional religious consciousness as the Bible does for Christians. When the validity of Odù is tested against the Bible and the Quran, Fashina insists that the Odù-Ifá is better because it cannot only be verified in daily living, but anyone can seek divination and regardless of the source or diviner - the scripture should hold its validity in the findings provided.¹⁴ As a matter of fact, the Odu-Ifá corpora are believed to be the living word and the unfailing wisdom of Olódùmarè. Ifá is the compendium of Yorùbá ancient wisdom and primary culture. The Ifá corpora were directly revealed from Òrúnmìlà, one of the primordial divinities linked with Olódùmarè, the Supreme Being. For the traditional Yoruba, the corpora possess final authority and they are perspicuous. In addition to these, the corpora are sufficient for their faith and practice. Ifá cannot be literally translated as it refers to several issues. It covers the peoples' religious traditions, philosophy, perception of their ethics, a process of worship and a set of scriptures.¹⁵ Karenga encapsulates Odùlfá in the following word:

Nowhere is the profundity and beauty of African spirituality more apparent than in the Odùlfá, the sacred text of the spiritual and ethical tradition of Ifá, which is one of the greatest sacred texts of the world and a classic of African and world literature. Its central message revolves around the teachings of the Goodness of and in the world; the chosen status of humans in the world; the criteria of a good world; and the requirements for a good world.¹⁶

The Odù-Ifá literary corpus contains sixteen major Odù (books). There are two hundred and forty other minor Odù which when combined will form two hundred and fifty-six Odù. These Odù corpuses are believed by the Yorùbá people in particular and Ifá worshippers in general, to contain the capacity to solve all existential problems of man. Ifá epistles have certain codes attached to them which form the basis of Ifá traditional spirituality accounting for the basis of all the Yoruba systems of divination.

Ifá divination process begins with the consultation to the Ifá priest and the necessary pre-Ifá divination order, such as ibò-dídì (casting of lots) commences the consultation of Ifá oracle. This is subsequently followed by divination performance with the use either ikin (divination palm-nuts) or Òpèlè-didà (casting by the divination chain). It is noted that cola-nut of four lobes could as well be used for Ifá divination with the same Ifá output. However, the earlier two mediums mentioned are frequently used by Ifá priests. This will be followed by the reading, marking, interpreting and reciting the story that comes with the associated symbol revealed by the Ifá divination instrument. Ifá priest guides his client(s) based on the prescriptions on the associated odù on what "to do in the light of the precedent which has been cited for him". The client then goes to perform the prescribed sacrifice order associated with the client's or supplicant's case. Abimbólá, says "What has emerged so far is that esè-Ifá is a type of "historical" poetry. Every poem of Ifá is an attempt to narrate, through the particular structure of Ifá divination poetry, things which the Ifá priest has been taught to believe actually happened in the past by narrating these stories of the past."¹⁷

Ifá is the greatest oracle of the Yorùbá that is "consulted on all important occasions." Ifá is regarded as the spokesperson not only for the gods but also for the living. It is regarded as the living foundation of Yorùbá culture. Munoz sees Ifá's scope beyond the Yorùbá cultural society when he says "Ifá is the most universal divinity among the Yorùbá and other West African people." Ifá is known to different people by different names throughout the world. For example, Ifá is known as Fá among the Fon of Republic of Benin, Eva to Nupes, Ifá in Cuba, USA, Brazil, Trinidad and Tobago, Jamaica, Surinam and Togo. Ifá is referred to by the Ewe as Afa, Ephod by Jews, Geomancy by Europeans and Margays. With these different realizations of Ifá nomenclature which cut across nations of the world, the prominence of Ifá is not in doubt. In fact, Ifá has over 70 million followers in Africa and the America. In 2005, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) proclaimed Ifá as one of the 86 traditions of the world to be recognized as masterpieces of oral and intangible heritage of humanity. By this proclamation, Ifá joined the league of heritages and therefore requiring urgent preservation. Ifá, as a religion, science or literary text, has over time been of great interest to scholars in different areas of human endeavors, like medicine, philosophy, religion, art and culture.¹⁸

The message of Ifá is an archetype of what had happened in the past as it is connected with the Ifá divination. Ifá religion has been a means by which Yorùbá culture (including language) is propagated in the diaspora. According to Abimbólá, Ifá divination literature is perhaps the most accomplished product of Yorùbá traditional culture.... No one who has studied Ifá in detail will fail to see the fact that the people of traditional Africa societies were not ignorant as we have often been told. The peoples of traditional Africa were largely illiterates to be sure. But they were no fools. Among them were elite classes such as the babaláwo who have preserved all the ingredients of their own culture in an almost completely oral form but in such a way that knowledge is codified and transmitted orally with care, patience and perseverance. Ifá is the Yorùbá traditional thought system per excellence.¹⁹

The preservation of the Yorùbá culture is guaranteed through Ifá. All the cultural contents of Ifá have been 'codified'. The codifications are in Ifá symbols in forms of Odù (major and minor). It is observed that Ifá poetry is a sacred Yorùbá genre that nobody may add or subtract from. The epistle is, according to Abimbólá, "preserved and disseminated from ancient times. It is believed that in this way the texts in Ifá literary corpus have been kept free from errors. The corpus, therefore, till today, is one of the reliable genres of the Yorùbá oral literature." According to Abimbólá,

"Ifá literary corpus can therefore be regarded as a set of historical and mythical poems offering to us through the use of analogy images and symbols what to do in order to be at peace with God, the supernatural powers, or neighbors and indeed, ourselves..."²⁰

Ifá* and Homosexuality: Outline of Argument and Comments

Since the Ifá Corpus is undeniably the peoples' sola scriptura, it will be apposite to examine a few of the Odù against homosexuality. The relevant thematic passages in the Odù, with philosophical import for the present purpose are Iwòrì Òbàrà, Òfún Irètẹ̀ and Iwòrì Òfún. One passage each in the first two and two passages will be examined in the last one. This is with a view to striking a balance between homosexuality and lesbianism.

OdùŌfún-Alaaye (Ōfún-Ìrètè) where Ifá as contained in Aseodu,²¹ (with author's translation) says:

epoše é jẹ'su isuseéj'epo
àkàsòdùn-úng'aká
obìnrinṣeébàsùnj'òkùnrinlò òkùnrinṣeèsùntij'obìnrinlò b'òkùnrinbá n b'òkùnrinsùn bí ikókó, bí ioówo
biikú biàgbàààrín
b'òbunrinbá n b'òbìnrinsùn
biépétè biòòrùn
bí eròfò bièèrì
b'òkùnrinbá n b'òbìnrinsùn b'òbìnrinbá n sùnt'òkùnrin biènf'oláyun'gbà bí ènf'oláyun'ra igiŌfún-O-Rètè lórógangan-olele diáfúnApón-Akọ
tí n lórèè fí OleleomoOlófinṣaya
Aponp'Olele ò jẹ o
kò juohuntí'fá n ṣelọ o
Aponp'Olele ò jẹ o
kò juohunt'Ébọra n ṣelọo

Palm oil is good to complement yam for consumption and yam is good as complement for eating palm-oil

the ladder is good for climbing the rafter

a woman is better for a man to make love to than his fellow man a man is better for a woman to sleep with than her fellow woman

if a man sleeps with a man

it will result into lumps, boils, and yaws

if a woman makes love to a fellow woman

it will result into murk, stinking odor, dirt and irritation

if a man makes love to a woman and a woman sleeps with a man

the result is feeling like being on top of the world

the feeling is like having unlimited and unqualified enjoyment

Ofun-Rete's organ is strong and turgid

This was the Ifá cast for a Chronic Bachelor

When going to marry Olele the offspring of Olofa

The Chronic Bachelor called upon Olele but she responded not

The problem is not more than what Ifá can solve

Comment on Odù-Òfún-Alaaye

Four important things are worthy of mention in this Odù-Ifá chapter. They include comparison, action, effects and resolution. Taking the first part of the four, mention is made of food items in comparison to copulation very early in the chapter. This is not strange because the Yoruba often identify enjoyment to taste matters. No wonder when they wish to talk of the enjoyment of copulation between a man and a woman, they talk about it in terms of the palate. They call it adùn má dẹ̀ẹ̀kẹ̀ (sweet but not of the cheeks). The Yoruba love good food; yam is one of the staple foods of the Yoruba.²²

The Yorùbá people relate the similar things together. Things those are complementary of each or one another or things that are opposition of each or one another. For example, Chandler says "such natural pairs are invariably loaded with cultural significance of good and the bad, the permitted and the forbidden." On the other hand, the co-operative binary exists when the repeated items are in natural agreement. As contained in the Ifá corpus quoted above- isu and epo, okùnrin and obìnrin, àkàsò and àkà. Yam is a tuber which though softens with cooking is usually hard to the palate. On the other hand, palm oil is a lubricant. Drinking a lubricant is not often done unless one hopes at detoxification of his or her body system. Yam too, is not easy to eat without condiments. This the stanza corroborates with a ladder being efficient in climbing heights. When yam is conjoined with palm oil, in eating it becomes sweet. The implication here is that yam and yam is hinting at gay copulation, while oil and oil hints at lesbianism. The belief of the Yorùbá people on the naturalness of male-female sexual relation in an ideal society is supported with dualism. The observation of complementary roles of binary to the Yorùbá belief system is rendered by Iléṣanmí that "The binary system, not of opposition but complementarily has always influenced the Yorùbá thought... The world is created in twins of another." A male and a female sexual relationship is found here to be in complementary relation.²³

The next is the action stage which is the extension of the comparison. The action speaks of either relationship between man and man or woman and woman. This fact, in this ancient stanza is an admission (or an indication of) of the existence of homosexuality in Yoruba land over a long time. The stanza identifies the problem of the existence of homosexuality and addressing the matter. That is the reason why the stanza talks of seeking the sweet relationships rather than one that is not. Closely following the above, is the effect of the action gay or lesbian relationship is likely to produce. A gay relationship will produce lumps, boils and yaws. On the other side, a lesbian relationship will produce murk, odor, dirt and irritation. In the opinion of this stanza, a homosexual relationship breeds negative influences injurious not only to the individual but also to the community. By extension, this lends credence to the fact that homosexuality is unacceptable because of its injurious tendencies to the populace. This leads to the final stage which has to do with resolution of the homosexual crisis. Here, Ifá is the solution to the case at hand. Ifá will determine the situation, through an enquiry of the client's destiny since he is *elerii*pin (witness to destiny) when the client was choosing his or her destiny. The divinity has the capability to proffer solution to an improper nature.²⁴ Another Ifá verse is Ìwòrì-Òbàrà as contained in Ifalola,²⁵ (with author's translation)

Ìwòrì-Òbàrà

*O dó ganganna
Ó kanganganna diáfúniwòrì
tiitindoayarèlòòró
ìwòrì o ò dẹ bẹrẹ
a tişéndónilóòròd'omo
ìwòrì o ò dẹ bẹrẹ*

you make love while standing you make love while bending this was the Ifa divination for Iwori who always make love to his wife standing Iwori kindly make love while lying down
It is wrong to make love while standing (subtle reference to men being with each other) Iwori kindly make love properly.

Comment on Odù Òfún-Alaaye

Òfún Alaaye Ifá epistle is an Odù that focuses on actual sexual relationship. This is evidenced that Ifá is a compendium of the tradition, practices and custom of the Yoruba people. The difference between the Odù Ìwòrì-Òbàrà (above) and the present one is that the first talked about the union between gay and straight. Odù Òfún-Alaaye touches on what happens between the two people, the actual coitus relationship. This one talks of the pleasure derivable between a male and a female in a state of standing and bending. The stanza condemns making love while standing against making love while bending. It ends with an appeal to Ìwòrì to make love to his spouse while lying down which is the acceptable way with a woman. Here, there is a subtle reference to gay relationship in the standing up while the lying down points to the male and female.²⁶

Ìwòrì-Wòdú (Ìwòrì-Òdì) Ifalola,²⁷ (with author's translation)

*Ìwòrìwòdioşebínńkan ire lóunnîşẹ Aworerenìwòrì tónwodina?
DíáfúnPanla Apo
Tikorokofẹ*

Tíyóò máafébinrinégbé ẹ rẹ
Ẹbóniwónnikó wá ẹ̀
Obínrintínfẹbinrinégbé ẹ rẹ
Ẹyin ò mò pé o nloowokuidini?

Iwori took a fanciful look at the genital and considered it a proper practice
 Do you consider Iwori who looks at the genitals as a good Awo ?
 This was Ifa's declarations to Panla-Apo
 Who failed to secure a husband to marry
 But choose to be in love with a fellow woman
 She was advised to offer ebo
 A woman who makes love to a fellow woman
 Don't you know that she is just looking at a non-productive lifeless genital ?

Comments Ìwòrì-Wòdìn (Ìwòrì Òdì)

The relevant part here is little, though pregnant with meaning. It is worthy of note to comment that the passage her is dealing with lesbianism, that is the nuptial relationship between a female and another female. This portion concerns eye-contact of the genitalia. The point here is that Panla-Apo chooses to love a fellow woman for the obvious reason that she failed to secure a husband. In Yoruba land, the reasons for a woman not being able to get a husband are myriad. Common among these are either she is not destined to have a husband or her inability to secure a husband may be the handiwork of evil people. Other reasons may be pride or negative stigma in her family history to mention only a few. As far as this stanza is concerned, her choice of a fellow female premised on an unmentioned reason is unacceptable. The act in itself is not condemnable hence the basis for choice. The stanza posits that proper sacrifice can remove any reason and makes all impossibilities possible.²⁸

Furthermore on the same stanza, Ifá continues with his argument on lesbianism when he says:

Báyìi làá ẹ̀lú
Ìlú ibádùn
Díáfúnwónnìlú Ìwòrì-Wòdìn
Níbiwónnikí wón lé Omọ-Oṣùiléewonjádé
Ẹ̀yí tó lókọ tan
Tólóun ò lókọ́fémó
Tíyóómáalèdímọ́bínrinégbé ẹ rẹ
Ẹbóniwónnikó wáá ẹ̀nẹ́ tóbá ẹ̀báyìi làá ẹ̀lú Ìlú ibádùnná?

If this is the way we administer the community
 The community would have been very desirous (to live in)

This was Ifa message to the citizens of Iwori-Wodi
 Who were advised to send all Omo-Osu away
 Those, who after getting married,

Who say they are no longer interested in their husband to continue to have intercourse with fellow women they were advised to offer ebọ
 if this is the way we administer the community would the community have been this desirous to live in?

The above brings the community into focus and tasks the elders of that community to make sure that the community is made desirous to inhabit. The citizens of Ìwòrì-Wòdì were advised to permit Omo-Osú to return to their fathers' houses after marriage. Omo-Osú are women who for one reason or the other are separated from their husband. The stanza is saying that their parents should not to allow them to stay single, rather to go back to their husbands. Obviously this passage is hinting at the women who had earlier been exposed to sexual satisfaction before separations from husbands seek to satisfy their sexual urge secretly with women to avoid adultery. Ifa's position is for them to seek the cause of their predicament through divination and proffer solutions to their individual challenges so as to be reconciled to their husband. Regarding homosexuality, this stanza holds that homosexuality is the function of a strained relationship with the opposite sex which can be corrected through appropriate divination and sacrifices.²⁹

In all the four Odù examined in this study, a few things come to the fore. Firstly, that homosexuality is not a new phenomenon; rather it has been with the people from time immemorial. In addition to this is the fact that gay and lesbian relationships are spoken about. This is evidenced in the assumptions that the readers of the Odù already understand the concept since; no effort has been made to describe the act. Secondly, homosexuality is not a welcome idea in the sacred scripture of the Yoruba. This is discernible in the condemnation of the enigma throughout the four passages examined. Closely following the above is the fact that all the quoted passages all proffer solutions for recovery from homosexual tendencies. On the issue of destiny, Ifá is saying that this can even be corrected if a person in one way or the other believes that by nature they are people given to the phenomenon. On a final note is the people's perception of children as another reason for detesting homosexuality in the Church. The Yoruba believe that a woman who is childless cannot count herself a part of the family until she bears a child for the husband. That is the reason for barren women's inordinate search for the fruit of the womb. Besides, the Yoruba believe in child procreation. They want children who will survive after them.³⁰ Thus the Yorùbá do say that eni tó wáyé tí kò bímọ, kò ráyé wá. Bó lówó, bókólé, ẹniẹlẹnini ó jogún ẹ.Omolàsẹhìndè, Omol'asọ (Whoever comes to this world without giving birth to a child or children, is just an onlooker(s) in the world. his riches and wealth will be inherited by an outsiders. It is a child that survives one, child looks after one).

Ifá, Homosexuality and National Development

The foregoing has been an attempt to examine homosexuality from the point of the sacred text of the Yoruba of Southwest Nigeria and as it relates to the idea of development. A cursory observation of the Odu corporal above, it is clear that homosexuality is repudiated. Furthermore, the passages reveal a few things of homosexuality and national development. These are seen in the areas of health challenges, child reproduction and the issue of stigmatization. The health problems that can emanate from homosexuality include but not limited to lumps, boils and yaws in gay relationships while lesbian relationships may result in murk, stinking odor, dirt and irritation. This position is corroborated by some medical researches that link single sex relationships to many ailments.³¹ A paper delivered at the Fourth International AIDS Malignancy Conference at the National Institutes of Health reported that:

Homosexual men with HIV have "a 37-fold increase in anal cancer, a 4-fold increase in Hodgkin's disease (cancer of the lymph nodes), a 71 2.7-fold increase in cancer of the testicles, and a 2.5-fold increase in lip cancer." "Studies Point to Increased Risks of Anal Cancer,"³²

Studies are replete with regard to stigmatization of homosexuals within the community, the works of Botnick, Cloete, Simbayi, Kalichman, Strebel, &Henda, Dowshen, Binns, &Garofalo, Herek, UNAIDS, are just a tip of the iceberg. Negative attitudes have been expressed towards people with homosexual tendencies. These are in the areas of HIV infected homosexuals by those who are not infected, age related stigma, self-stigma and those coming from relatives who see the homosexuals as queer people. These have come with dire consequences as observed by Smit et al. On the issue of inability to procure children, Ifa protests strongly that homosexuality is not to be encouraged. While the passages above speak about copulation, the joy to be derived from heterosexual relationship, they also talk about the value of raising children. The Yoruba take the issue of childhood serious as have been observed above. The child adoption strategy advanced by homosexuals in answer to inability to procure children has no basis in Yoruba land. The reason for this is the fact the Yoruba; though love children take care not to raise children whose ancestry is unknown or doubtful. The reason for this is that they believe that such social vices like stealing, epilepsy, mental disorder is hereditary. So they are careful not to jeopardize their own bloodline.³³

Conclusion

The foregoing has been an attempt to examine the sacred scripture of the Yoruba religious consciousness. This is against the backdrop of attempts at looking at what other religions are saying about the homosexual tendencies. It was discovered that the Yoruba Religion through the Ifá corpus has fundamental things to say about the subject matter. Some of the observations include the fact that the existence of homosexuals is acknowled condemned guidelines Corpus has to contribu

of the ind homosexu necessary c

Endnotes

1. Abi
Oxi
2. Abi
3. Abi
Deb
201
4. A. I tow
diss
5. Hei
Psy
6. Wei
Yor
7. G. M
In J imp
8. Whi
9. Ha Anti
10. H. B
Los
11. Kup
Hom
Soci
12. M.R
Hom
13. Sprig (Was 14. J. Da
the C
15. Abes

acknowledged through all the passages examined. Those who are homosexuals are not condemned but the act is regarded as an anomaly that the scriptures have laid down guidelines to correct the issue. Invariably, while there are gays so are there lesbians. Ifa Corpus has touched everything in the worldview of the Yoruba. This work has been able to contribute its quota to the growing literature on homosexuality from the perspectives of the indigenous religion of the Yoruba. The position of the scripture is that homosexuality is an anathema but can be corrected through proper sacrifices and necessary counsel.

Endnotes

1. Abimbola, Wande. 1976. IFÁ: An Exposition of Ifá Literary Corpus (Ibadan: Oxford University Press, 1976), 45.
2. Abimbola, 46.
3. Abass Bolatito, The Natural Law Theory of Morality and the Homosexuality Debate in African Culture. Ogirisi: A new journal of African Studies. (July, 2012), 19.
4. A. L. Whitehead, Sacred Rites and Civil Rights: Religion's Effect on Attitudes toward Same-Sex Unions and the Perceived Cause of Homosexuality. M.A dissertation submitted to the Graduate Faculty of Baylor University, 2009, 59.
5. Heider, Fritz. 1944. "Social Perception and Phenomenal Causality," in The Psychology of Interpersonal Relations. (New York: Wiley, 1944), 354
6. Weiner, Bernard. A Theory of Motivation for Some Classroom Experience. New York: University Press, 1979), 71.
7. G. M. Herek, "Stigma, Prejudice, and Violence Against Lesbians and Gay Men" In John C. Gonsiorek & James D. Weinrich (Eds.) Homosexuality: Research implications for public policy. (Newbury Park, CA Press, 1999), 76.
8. Whitehead, 56.
9. Hans, Jason, Megan Kersey and Claire Kimberly. Self-Perceived Origins of Attitudes toward Homosexuality. Journal of Homosexuality 59(1) (2012), 32-34.
10. H. Blumer, Symbolic Interactionism: Perspective and Method. (Berkeley and Los Angeles, CA: University Of California Press, 1969), 44.
11. Kuptsevyh, A. 2014. The Influence of Religiosity On The Attitudes Towards Homosexuality Among College Students. M. A. Thesis, Department of Sociology (Minnesota: State University, Mankato Press, 2014), 76.
12. M.R. Botnick. Part 3: A community divided. Journal of Homosexuality. (October, 2000), 38.
13. Sprigg, P. 2011. Debating Homosexuality: Understanding Two Views. (Washington, D. C., 2011), 54
14. J. Dallas, Speaking of Homosexuality: A Christian Response to the Arguments of the Gay Rights Movement. Christian Research Journal. 29, (June, 2006), 6.
15. Abass Bolatito. 76

16. N. L. Geisler, and R. E. MacKenzie, What Think Ye of Rome? (Part Three): The Catholic-Protestant Debate on Biblical Authority. <http://www.equip.org/PDF/DC170-3.pdf>. Accessed on 12th November, 2016, 69.
17. N. Fashina, Re(-)Placing Theory in African Studies: Ifa Literary Corpus, Origins, Universality and the Integration of Epistemology. 2009, 156.
18. M. Oke, An Indigenous Yoruba - African Philosophical Argument against Capital Punishment. The Journal of Philosophy, Science & Law 7 (2007), 1-19.
19. Karenga, M. 2012. Ethical Insights from Odulfa: Choosing to be Chosen. Los Angeles Sentinel. <http://www.us-organization.org/position/documents/EthicalInsightsfromOdulfa08-30-12.pdf> Assessed on 20th January 2017, 6.
20. Abimbólá, Wándé. Sixteen Great Poems of Ifá. (Niamey: UNESCO, 1975), 20.
21. Munoz, Louiz A Living Tradition: Studies in Yorùbá Civilization. (Ibàdàn: Bookcraft Limited, 2003), 179.
22. B. A. Robinson, "Ifá: The Religion of the Yorùbá People <http://www.religioustolerance.org/Ifa.htm>, 2008, 39.
23. Abimbólá, 57.
24. Abimbólá, 20.
25. F. A. Aseodu, OjulowoOrikiIfaApaKinni. (Lagos: Project Publications Limited, 1989), 29
26. Chandler, Charles. "Semiotics for Beginners." <<http://www.arber.ac.UK/media/documents/S4B/semioa.html>, 2000, 39.
27. Ilésanmí, Yorùbá Orature and Literature: A Cultural Analysis. (Ilé-Ifè: University Press, 2004), 432.
28. Ifalola, Ifa yesterday, Ifa today, Ifa tomorrow <http://ifalola.blogspot.com.ng/2007/06/ifa-and-homosexuality.html?m=1>. Assessed on 8th January 2017, 43.
29. Ifalola, 14.
30. Ifalola, 15.
31. UNAIDS. UNAIDS fact sheet on stigma and discrimination. 2003. Retrieved from http://data.unaids.org/publications/Fact-Sheets03/fs_stigma_discrimination_en.pdf. accessed on 6th January, 2017, 67.
32. Cloete, Simbayi, Kalichman, Strebel, Henda, 2008. Stigma and discrimination experiences of HIV-positive men who have sex with men in Cape Town, South Africa. AIDS Care 20 (2008): 20.
33. P. J. Smit, et al. 2012. HIV-related stigma within communities of gay men: A literature review. Aids Care 24(2012), 4-6.

Bibliography

- Abass Bolatito, 2012. The Natural Law Theory of Morality and the Homosexuality Debate in African Culture. Ogirisi: A new journal of African Studies, 2012.
- Abimbólá, W. Sixteen Great Poems of Ifá. Niamey: UNESCO, 1975.
- Abimbola, W. 1976. Ifá: An Exposition of Ifá Literary Corpus. Ibadan: Oxford University Press, 1976.
- Abimbólá, Wándé. Ifá divination Poetry. New York: Nok Publishers, 1977.
- Aseodu, F. A. 1989. OjulowoOrikiIfaApaKinni. Lagos: Project Publications Limited. 1989.
- Botnick, M. R. Part 1: HIV as 'the line in the sand' Journal of Homosexuality. 2000.
- Botnick, M. R. Part 3: A community divided. Journal of Homosexuality, 2000.
- Blumer, Herbert. 1969. Symbolic Interactionism: Perspective and Method. Berkeley and Los Angeles, CA: University Of California Press, 1969.
- Cloete A., Simbayi L.C., Kalichman S.C., Strebel A., Henda N. 2008. Stigma and discrimination experiences of HIV-positive men who have sex with men in Cape Town, South Africa. AIDS Care, 2008.
- Dallas, J. 2006. Speaking of Homosexuality: A Christian Response to the Arguments of the Gay Rights Movement. Christian Research Journal, 2006.
- Dowshen N., Binns H.J., Garofalo R. Experiences of HIV-related stigma among young men who have sex with men. 2009. AIDS Patient Care STDs, 2009.
- Fashina, N. Re(-)Placing Theory in African Studies: Ifa Literary Corpus, Origins, Universality and the Integration of Epistemology, 2009.
- Geisler, N. L. and MacKenzie, R. E. What Think Ye of Rome? (Part Three): The Catholic-Protestant Debate on Biblical Authority. <http://www.equip.org/PDF/DC170-3.pdf>. Accessed on 12th November, 2016.
- Hans, Jason D., Megan Kersey and Claire Kimberly. Self-Perceived Origins of Attitudes toward Homosexuality. Journal of Homosexuality 59(1), 2012.
- Heider, Fritz. Social Perception and Phenomenal Causality. Psychological Review in The Psychology of Interpersonal Relations. New York: Wiley, 1958.
- Herek, G. M. "Stigma, Prejudice, and Violence Against Lesbians and Gay Men" In John C. Gonsiorek & James D. Weinrich (Eds.), Homosexuality: Research implications for public policy. Newbury Park, CA: Sage, 1991.
- Ifalola Ifa yesterday, Ifa today, Ifa tomorrow <http://ifalola.blogspot.com.ng/2007/06/ifa-and-homosexuality.html?m=1>. Assessed on 8th January, 2017.
- Ilésanmí, Thomas. 2004. YorùbáOrature and Literature: A Cultural Analysis. Ilé-Ife: University Press, 2004.
- Karenga, M. 2012. Ethical Insights from Odulfa: Choosing to be Chosen. Los Angeles Sentinel. <http://www.usorganization.org/position/documents/EthicalInsightsfromOdulfa0830-12.pdf> Assessed on 20th January, 2017.

Kuptsevykh, A. The Influence of Religiosity On The Attitudes Towards Homosexuality Among College Students. M. A. Thesis, Department of Sociology. Minnesota State University, Mankato, 2014.

Munoz, Louiz. A Living Tradition: Studies in Yorùbá Civilization. Ìbàdàn: Bookcraft Limited. 2003.

Qdèyemí, J. "Ifá and Òrìṣà Temple" <oyekuofin.com/what-is-ifa, 2013.

Oke, M. An Indigenous Yoruba - African Philosophical Argument against Capital Punishment. The Journal of Philosophy, Science & Law, 2007.

Robinson, B. A. "Ifá: The Religion of the Yorùbá People <http://www.religioustolerance.org/Ifa.htm>, 2008.

Smit, P. J. et al. HIV-related stigma within communities of gay men: A literature review. Aids Care 24(3-4), 2012.

Sprigg, P. Debating Homosexuality: Understanding Two Views. Washington, 2011,

Whitehead, A. L. Sacred Rites and Civil Rights: Religion's Effect on Attitudes toward Same- Sex Unions and the Perceived Cause of Homosexuality. M.A dissertation submitted to the Graduate Faculty of Baylor University, 2009.

The Washington Blade. www.washblade.com/health/000602hm. accessed on 6th January 2017

UNAIDS. UNAIDS fact sheet on stigma and discrimination. 2003. Retrieved from http://data.unaids.org/publications/Fact-Sheets03/fs_stigma_discrimination_en.pdf. accessed on 6th January, 2017.

Weiner, Bernard. A Theory of Motivation for Some Classroom Experience, 1979.

Weiner, Bernard. 1985. An Attribution Theory of Achievement, Motivation, and Emotion. Psychological Review, 1958.