PREFACE

The aim of this book is to provide a thorough orientation to the basic concepts in Civic Education at the senior secondary schools. In order to achieve this aim, the course has been written in strict compliance with the syllabus requirements of the curriculum designed by NERDC, for the study of Civic Education at this level. The major contents of the new subject-Civic Education, are meant to help students acquire knowledge, attitude, values and basic skills that will help them to become responsible and disciplined members of their societies.

Each book in the series covers a year of Senior Secondary Civic Education work. Book 1 focuses on themes such as values, emerging issues, citizenship, representative democracy, pillars of democracy, human rights, cultism and law and order. Book 2 focuses on themes such as citizenship, democracy and national development, dangers of political apathy, achieving popular participation in politics, limitations of human rights, drug and drug abuse, responsible parenthood, traffic regulations and relationships. Book 3 focuses on characteristics of human rights, dangers of political apathy, public service in a democracy, civil society and popular participation, constitutional democracy and the rule of law, and human trafficking.

Throughout the book, a deliberate effort has been made not only to teach new concepts, but also consolidate on what students have learnt at the junior secondary schools. We have done all this giving due regard to concept sequence and text coherence. This has helped us to put together a course that will, among other things, promote the understanding of the inter-relationship between man and woman, government and society, highlight the structure of government, its functions and the responsibilities of government to the people and vice-versa, enhance the teaching and learning of emerging issues, and inculcate in students their duties and obligations to society.

The unique features of this course include its clarity of language, abundance of good quality illustrations and inclusion of self-assessment questions at the end of each theme. We strongly believe this course should make the teaching and learning of Civic Education more efficient, interesting and effective.
